I understand the statement "Choosing future profession is a difficult task for every school-leaver" as a statement with a good and clear point. Because it is really difficult to choose a profession when you are 14-18 years old, and just graduated. You hadn't tried anything yet and choosing kind of blindfolded, by choosing the thing that you take most interesting, but sometimes

I understand this statement like it is very hard to choose your future when there's so many ways to go. At least you need to think about what you want. You can talk about choosing future profession with your friends or parents. Well, you determine which path to choose, but some advices from older people will be useful.

Profession is the one of the most important things ~~in~~ in people's lives. When we were kids we all dreamt about our future profession. Some of us wanted to be actors or singers. A lot of kids wanted to be astronauts.

For the school-leavers it is may be very difficult to choose their future profession. They don't have a lot of time to choose who they wanted to be. ~~And~~ Their choices will play a huge role in their lives. And it scares them as hell.

There is a lot of universities, colleges and companies, where they can study or work. But which ~~one~~ one is better for them?

They should make right choice.
